Any suggestion for improving student's employability and skills.

The syllabus overall looks quite comprehensive seeing the dynamic market. The coverage of subjects including Fluid mechanics, Geomatics has been fitted where it should have been. Moreover, there is one course named "Programming for problem solving" which I personally found an interesting one as we have been helping our clients with the same. Many industries seek for some external assistance whenever they are unable to troubleshoot it internally. And introducing this course in the curriculum may give the budding technologists an advantage.
