Corrosion Behavior of Some Post-Plasma-Spraying Gas Nitrided Metallic Coatings on ASTM-SA210 Grade A-1 Boiler Steel at High Temperature

Vikas Chawla

Department of Mechanical Engineering

I.K. Gujral Punjab Technical University, Kapurthala- 144603, India

Email: vikas.chawla.ikgptu@gmail.com

ABSTRACT

Hot corrosion is the major degradation mechanism of failure of boiler and gas turbine components. In the current investigations; Al-Cr and Ti-Al metallic coatings were deposited on ASTM-SA210 Grade A-1 boiler steel using plasma spray process. Then the gas nitriding of the coatings was done in the lab and the parameters were optimized after conducting several trials using commonly available equipment and starting materials. Thermogravimetry technique has been used to study the high temperature corrosion behavior of bare and coated boiler steel after exposure to air and molten salt environment (a salt mixture of Na_2SO_4 -60% V_2O_5 dissolved in distilled water) at 900°C under cyclic conditions for 50 cycles. The corrosion products are analyzed by using XRD, SEM, and FE-SEM/EDAX to reveal their microstructural and compositional features for elucidating the corrosion mechanisms. Both the coatings successfully protected the substrate and were effective in decreasing the corrosion rate when subjected to cyclic oxidation at 900°C for 50 cycles in air and molten salt. Based on the findings of the present study, the coatings under study are recommended for applications to super-heater and reheater tubes of boilers and all those surfaces that face fireside corrosion, such as fluidized beds, industrial waste incinerators, internal combustion engines, gas turbines or steam turbines, to provide protection against degradation in these environments.

Dear Dr. Gupta,

As discussed, after received confirmation from Dr. Ahmed Chemori, Senior CNRS Researcher, LIRMM France. We may plan a one day international workshop in the area of Robotics and applications, in PTU Campus. The tentative dates can be: 24 or 25 (preferred) February 2020.

Upon agreement, we can discuss and plan the tentative list of speakers working in the area. We may include, Dr. Ekta Singla (IIT Ropar), Dr. Ashish Singla (Thapar), conditional to their concurrence. We can look for some experts from NIT Jalandhar/Srinagar/IIT Mandi/NIT Hamirpur or any other expert you know. It can be on the lines of similar workshop organised by us in IIT Ropar in 2019, <https://punjabrobotics.com/robotics-2019-workshop-robotics/>

The proposed event can be organised jointly, or solely by you. Kindly discuss at your end at let me know the way forward. CV of Dr. Ahmed Chemori Senior CNRS Researcher LIRMM France is also attached and also cced in this email

Dear Dr. Gupta,

As discussed, after received confirmation from Dr. Ahmed Chemori, Senior CNRS Researcher, LIRMM France. We may plan a one day International workshop in the area of Robotics and applications, in PTU Campus. The tentative dates can be: 24 or 25 (preferred) February 2020.

Upon agreement, we can discuss and plan the tentative list of speakers working in the area. We may include, Dr. Ekta Singla (IIT Ropar), Dr. Ashish Singla (Thapar), conditional to their concurrence. We can look for some experts from NIT Jalandhar/Srinagar/IIT Mandi/NIT Hamirpur or any other expert you know. It can be on the lines of similar workshop organised by us in IIT Ropar in 2019. <http://putrabiotech.com/information-and-wearable-robotics/>

The proposed event can be organised jointly, or solely by you. Kindly discuss at your end at let me know the way forward. CV of Dr. Ahmed Chemori Senior CNRS Researcher LIRMM France is also attached and also cced in this email
